CMH VISITING RESEARCH FELLOWS NAMED

The U.S. Army Center of Military History (CMH) has announced that David W. Hogan of Duke University and Esther A. Allen of the University of South Carolina have been selected to be CMH Visiting Research Fellows for the academic year 1985-1986. The awards were made under the Dissertation Year Fellowship in American Military History Program. Hogan and Allen will each receive a stipend of $5,000. Hogan's topic is "The Evolution of the Concept of the U.S. Army Rangers, 1942-1983" and Allen's topic is "The Wac Mission: The Testing Time from Korea."

Developed to promote unofficial research and study in American military history, the Dissertation Year Fellowships provide financial support and scholarly assistance to promising students who have completed all requirements for the Ph.D. degree except for the dissertation. Information about the fellowship program for the 1986-1987 academic year will be distributed shortly.
